

COUNCIL PLANNING TO INVESTIGATE POSSIBILITY OF MUNICIPAL PLANTS

STUDY SURVEY

Committee Appointed to Draw Resolution for Hiring Engineer

LEAGUE MAKES MOVE

Gas, Water Company
Rates Talked, Too

That city council is seriously considering municipal ownership of at least one utility plant was shown Wednesday evening when John C. Goeller, president of that body, appointed Councilmen C. O. Leist, Frank Marion and Julius Helweggen with City Solicitor Paul E. Adkins, to prepare a resolution to be presented to council next Wednesday evening "looking to the employment of a capable engineer to survey the possibilities of a municipal light plant here."

Appointment of the committee to prepare the resolution was made after council talked for almost two hours on the question of utility expenses. The meeting did not adjourn until 11 p. m., and then only after plans were made to meet again next Wednesday in an adjourned session. Council expects to have representatives from the Southern Ohio Electric Co. here for what several councilmen termed "a showdown meeting."

REJECT OFFERS

The power company has made several offers to council concerning street light rates, it is reported, but none have met with approval. The city's light bill continues to grow, and so does the account for fire hydrants. Councilman Frank Marion, near the conclusion of the meeting said, "We cannot pay for our lights, we should shut them off."

The utility question was tossed into council Wednesday when a committee from the Circleville Citizens league presented a resolution passed by the trustees of that group urging council to employ an engineer to make a survey.

The text of the resolution presented by E. L. Crist, A. V. Courtwright and Ben Gordon, follows:

"Be it resolved by the board of trustees of the Circleville Citizens league that as the investigation by said league shows that it is feasible and desirable that the city of Circleville construct its own municipal light and power plant to serve said community; and whereas said Circleville Citizens league is of the opinion that it is necessary to make a survey of said city in regard to said light and power question.

"Therefore be it resolved that the council of the City of Circleville be requested, in the public interest, to pass the necessary legislation to employ a competent engineer to make a survey of said city in regard to obtaining the necessary information needed in the construction of a municipal light and power plant for said city."

"Signed,
"Harry W. Heffner,
"Secretary."

During the evening a number of figures concerning cost of operating municipal plants were read to council by the representatives of the league.

Not only is the light and power company to be the object of a council offensive but strenuous efforts to obtain a lower gas rate and a reduction in water hydrant expense are to be made. The Ohio Fuel Gas Co franchise expired in March, 1930.

SEEKS TRANSFER

Deputy Auditor T. D. Krinn was to appear before the Relief Commission of Ohio Thursday afternoon to ask permission to transfer $500 from the Gasoline Tax Fund to the Poor Relief fund.

According to County Auditor Clifford M. White, the Poor Fund on April 1 was overdrawn to the amount of approximately $1,500 while the Gasoline Tax and License fund maintained a balance of $81,000.

Gas "Gate Rate" Probe In Offing

Governor Signs Lloyd Bill Approving Investigation by Proper Authorities; Columbus Sees Voluntary Light-Power Cut While One Gas Company Fights Lower Rate.

COLUMBUS, April 6.—By a stroke of the pen Governor George White today had opened the way for vast reductions in gas rates throughout Ohio.

The chief executive late yesterday affixed his signature to the Lloyd bill permitting the state utilities commission to investigate the "gate rates" charge to retail gas companies by wholesale companies. Reductions in "gate rates," with consequent reductions for ordinary rates are expected to result.

In signing the bill, which was introduced by Senator John A. Lloyd (R) of Portsmouth, the governor said:

"PROPER CONTROL"
"I feel that this measure fills a long existing gap helpful in enabling the commission to exercise proper control."

Lloyd, while demanding passage of the bill in the legislature, declared it would mean reduced rates for Portsmouth, Kenton and Lima. Members of the utilities commission have approved the bill and expect to act in a short time to see how it may be applied.

COLUMBUS, April 6.—Rumors that the Columbus Railway, Power & Light Co. plans to reduce its electric rates in this city were prevalent in official circles today.

MEET ON APRIL 14

The possibility of lower rates will be discussed at a meeting of city council and Ben W. Marr, Rail-Light president, on April 14.

According to the rumors the rate cut is likely to be a cent and a half or two cents a kilowatt hour on the maximum rate, now six cents, the Rail-Light Co. reported net earnings of more than two millions last year on its combined electricity and street car operations. Although its railway operations incurred a loss.

COLUMBUS, April 6.—Application of the West Ohio Gas Co. for a postponement of the effectiveness of new gas rates in Lima and Kenton, as ordered by state utilities commission, was to be argued today in the Ohio supreme court.

Attorneys for the gas company have requested a stay of execution, pending the hearing of an appeal which was filed with the supreme court last Saturday. The new rates, which were reduced by the commission, were scheduled to go into effect today in Kenton and Monday in Lima, unless a stay is ordered.

Primo's Juliet

Here is Emilia Tersini, 20-year-old London waitress, who was recently awarded damages approximating $14,280 in her breach of promise suit against Primo Carnera, giant Italian boxer, at the English capital. During the trial it was revealed that the heart of a poet beats in the mighty breast of the Amling Alp. Some of the love letters read in court would have done credit to a poet laureate.

FILE CHARGES AGAINST PAIR

Boltenhouse To Face Breaking and Entering Complaint of Cook.

With hearings set for Thursday afternoon Fenton Boltenhouse, 20 Route 5, and George Eblin, 19, Island-id, were to face different charges in Mayor B. T. Hedges' court.

Officers were doubtful whether or not charges of breaking and entering the inhabited dwelling of James Cook, S. Pickaway-st., would be pressed against Eblin, but charges of malicious destruction of property were filed Wednesday night against him by Harold Holt, E. Main-st., owner of the Dumm grocery store building, at Pickaway and Walnut-sts.

Holt charged Eblin with willful and malicious destruction of property by tearing a penny chewing gum machine from the wall of the grocery on Tuesday night.

Boltenhouse was transferred to the county jail late Wednesday afternoon after Eblin had confessed theft of the gum vending machine.

Boltenhouse will face charges of breaking and entering the Cook home where he was captured early Wednesday and held at revolver point until police arrived. Mr. Cook filed the affidavit Wednesday afternoon.

Officer Fred Fitzpatrick filed a charge of intoxication against Eblin who has constantly denied entering the Cook home although in his confession he admitted being with Boltenhouse on Tuesday night.

BEER TO FLOW FRIDAY

NATION READY

19 States, District of Columbia Get 3.2 Beer at Midnight

CELEBRATIONS FEW

Milwaukee to Broadcast Its "Beer Party"

NEW YORK April 6.—America's thirteen-year drought comes to an end at midnight tonight when it will become legal to buy, sell, transport and drink 3.2 per cent beer in 19 states and the District of Columbia.

The rest of the country will go off the near-beer standard at subsequent dates, depending upon legislation in the various states.

BEER PERMITS PUT $17,200 IN TREASURY

COLUMBUS, April 6.—The Ackerman-Lawrence beer law brought in $17,200 in revenue yesterday in the few hours that the beer commission accepted money in payment for licenses.

L. L. Paris, director of the commission, said today that much of the money may have to be returned, as it was accepted from all persons who applied for permits. The funds were wrapped in a box and deposited at the state treasury overnight.

part, will mark the advent of the new era, according to advices received today by International News Service from all parts of the nation. There will be comparatively few public celebrations, the brewers themselves having taken the lead in turning thumbs down on "big night to-night" whoopee parties.

MILWAUKEE READY

Milwaukee, famous for its beer in "the good old days," will be an exception. So will two other brewing centers, Chicago and St. Louis. While beer is being rushed out of the big breweries of Milwaukee to waiting celebrants a running description of the epic event will be broadcast over a coast-to-coast network.

CLEVELAND, April 6.—The beer shortage became acute in Cleveland today as it became known that the only 3.2 beer which will be available here tomorrow will have to be imported from other cities.

Local distributing agencies of national breweries prepared to receive plane and train loads of the 3.2 beverage. The trains it was reported, will be patrolled by heavily armed guards to prevent hijacking.

The broadcast will begin at 11:30 p. m. at station WISN and will be carried from coast to coast over the Columbia Broadcasting system network.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., April 6.—If beer is okay in the White House, then why not in the California capital?

So observed Governor James Rolph, Jr. today when advised that San Francisco friends planned to send him a case of 3.2 per cent beer by airplane tomorrow.

The shipment will not be refused at the California state house, Rolph said, adding attention to the recent statement of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt that beer would be permitted in the White House.

Probe Of Crash Begins Monday

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Plans for an exhaustive inquiry into circumstances surrounding the crash of the navy dirigible Akron were completed here today as sea and aircraft of the service intensified their search for possible survivors, bodies and wreckage in the disaster.

Lt. Com. H. V. Wiley, second in command of the big airship when she crashed and one of the three survivors, rushed a written report of the incident to completion and was to submit it to Secretary of the Navy Swanson today. He and the two enlisted survivors, Moody E. Erwin and R. E. Deal, were to be received at the White House today.

Wiley's written report may or may not be made public. Admiral

State Beer Commission to Handle Big Cities Permits-First

COMMISSION FULL

Several Firms Here Seek Licenses

COLUMBUS, April 7.—Judge Edward T. Dixon of Cincinnati, today was elected chairman of the state liquor control commission at the first full meeting of the body here.

E. J. Sklenicka of Cleveland, was elected temporary secretary of the commission. His term will be seven years.

The terms of other members of the commission are as follows:

Howard Goddard of Marietta, two years.

George C. Pfeiffer of Toledo, three years.

John M. Taylor of Columbus, four years.

Dr. E. L. Mather of Akron, five years.

Norman V. Parr of New Philadelphia, six years.

Many of the thirsty subjects of jovial King Gambrinus snatched their lips today in anticipation of the amber torrent of legalized 3.2 per cent beer that on the stroke of 12 tonight will wash away 13 years of official dryness. But there's a catch in it as far as Circleville is concerned.

Until late this afternoon no local restaurants, clubs, or business places which have applied to the state beer commission have received licenses to dispense the fluid. It is possible that several will obtain their permits later in the day but indications were that they would not get them until Friday.

ATHENS, April 6.—Members of the Athens W. C. T. U. will not patronize business places that handle beer, they decided at a meeting Wednesday night. There were 35 of the union's 65 members present when the motion was made and all seconded it.

Only a small amount of beer was expected to be available through the state as a result of the physical impossibility of the commission to act upon all applications for licenses.

Efforts were being concentrated upon the issuance of permits to a few hotels and some of the better known restaurants in metropolitan cities which means that cities of Circleville's size will follow in line.

Governor George White completed his beer commission late Wednesday. It now includes L. L. Paris, of Lynchburg, director; Edward T. Dixon of Cincinnati, Democrat; E. J. Sklenicka of Cleveland, Democrat; John M. Taylor of Columbus, Republican; George C. Pfeiffer of Toledo, Democrat; Harvard Goddard of Marietta, Republican, and Norman V. Parr of New Philadelphia, Democrat, and president of the Ohio Elks association.

The appointments of the latter three were announced last night. It is expected practically all of Circleville's beer supply will come from Columbus and even though some business places would be granted permits late today the "suds" would not be delivered until sometime Friday thus ending any hopes of clubs or individuals to have a "beer" party.

CHILLICOTHE READY
The Scioto Beverage and Supply Co., a branch of the Wagner Brewery of Columbus will supply Chilli's needs. Erwin Wissler, Chilli's manager of the plant, has announced that a limited supply of Wagner brew will be available for Chilli's on Friday but on Saturday there will be enough to supply all demands. The branch has already received orders from 300 users and individuals for 300 cases, 24 quarts to the case.

THOUGHT CLEARED
Deputy Custer and Deputy Moore, Fairfield Co. Cause Arrest of Three.

Arrests of Thomas Randolph of Walnut-st., and Theodore Curtis of Elm-st., late Wednesday, by Deputy Sheriff Henry Custer and Deputy Ed Moore of Fairfield Co. has cleared up a long-standing chicken theft case.

According to Deputy Custer and Deputy Moore, the three men confessed to stealing chickens from the farm of J. W. Smith, who was arrested last week on a charge of stealing chickens from the same farm.

ANTIOCH PRESIDENT ASSAILS COLLEGES

COLUMBUS, April 6.—A sweeping criticism of American colleges and universities for their failure to stress the development of character was pronounced here today by President Arthur E. Morgan of Antioch college at the annual meeting of the Ohio College Association.

Dr. Morgan charged that the schools of higher learning "have greatly mislead our youth," and that they often teach that higher education is primarily for intellectual pleasure.

Increasing intellectual discrimination. "The modern world has approached the limits of its ability to use intelligence," he declared. "Human relations have become so complex that no one, no matter how intelligent, can protect himself by intelligence alone. Current social problems are vastly complicated through lack of character."

CHARACTER NEEDED

He believes that further increase of intelligence, while of great value, is relatively unimportant, "because the need of character overshadows it."

"The very fate of civilization hangs upon the development of ethical purpose and disciplined character," he predicted.

Another criticism he offered was that "except as to science laboratories, higher education has largely forgotten that thought is valid only as based on experience."

"It has relied on the incidental and accidental experiences to supply the data thinking, and has failed to provide representative experiences in an orderly and intelligent manner."

Dr. Morgan believes that education should be the "fullest and best proportioned development of every element of personality." To give full expression to such an objective, he said, would require "a revolution in educational practice."

Danger in Neglecting Your Eyes

Too Often Warnings of Trouble Are Disregarded

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City.

DOCTORS ADVISE and constantly stress the importance of taking good care of the eyes. They put out their warnings, but many of us neglect them. Neglect of slight eye ailments may lead to serious trouble and, in some instances, even, to loss of vision.

Too many persons take it for granted that their eyes are healthy. They rarely consult a physician and are only concerned about the eyes when there is actual pain, sticking together of the lids, poor vision, or some other uncomfortable symptom.

Cataract is an ailment of the eye which is often met in some localities. It is a condition seen in old age, but it may occur in the young as well. The affliction develops slowly. Ultimately it causes blindness of the involved eye.

The cause of the disease has never been discovered. It is probable that it is due to the failure of the body to deal with some of its chemical problems. Changes in the crystalline lens of the eye result in cloudiness, and dim the vision. Cataract may be confined to one eye or it may involve both eyes.

Cataract in Children

Occasionally the affliction can be traced to some constitutional disease. For example, it is not uncommon in persons suffering from diabetes.

Another form of cataract is traced to a blow or injury to the eye. This is called "traumatic cataract." The cloudiness of the lens is due to a rupture of the capsule of the lens and the admission of fluids of the eye to the lens. Any injury to the eye is serious and must never be neglected.

Cataract in children is a rare and unusual occurrence. They are born with it. Early operation is important because delay leads to impairment of the vision which can be restored by successful treatment.

Many neglect going to a physician because they fear "the knife." The operation for cataract is so simple, so brief and so painless that it need cause no alarm.

One who has cataract should have a thorough physical examination by the physician. All centers of infection, teeth, tonsils and sinuses, should be given appropriate treatment.

The Housewife's Question Box

Question.—How can bread flour be told from pastry flour?

Answer.—The label on the sack usually will tell. Bread flour is made from hard or spring wheat and pastry flour from soft or winter wheat. Under a strong light, bread flour is a slightly creamy color and pastry flour is white. When a quantity of pastry flour is pinched between the fingers it tends to hold its shape and stand up in sharp peaks. Bread flour tends to crumble and points fall away from the peaks. When rubbed between the fingers pastry flour feels soft and velvety. Bread flour feels slightly gritty.

Harmonica Band, Outdoor Camping, Clowns Feature

Scouts are not only inclined toward outdoor activities but they are also interested in music. Troop 158 sponsored by the American Legion of Circleville will furnish some real music by its Harmonica band at the Boy Scout circus, April 21 and 22.

With the splendid music that this Troop can render on their Harmonicas they have assumed the responsibility of erecting a Lean-To shelter, which is so often used by Troops on over-night hikes and in summer camps. The Lean-To will be approximately 10x12 feet and will show some real use of Scout training and its instruction.

Troop 158 is under the leadership of William Betts, Jr., the scoutmaster, and the Troop committee composed of the following men: Reed Shafer, Ralph Ward, and James A. Cook with the following Scouts: Donald Beatty, Robert Betts, Orr, Lesworth, Edward C. Elmer, J. Richard Funk, Frank Gilt, Warren B. Goode, Dudley Lee, Carl Leisher, Robert Liston, James Mahoney, Carl E. Martin, Mark Maxey, Paul Miller, Elza Paxton, William O. Pike, James Price and Allen Smith.

Troop 168 whose parent institution is the Children's Home, under the leadership of Scoutmaster Malcolm Parrett, with the Troop committee, Charles C. McClure, C. H. Eichinger and Dwight Steele, with the following boys, Jesse Chandler, Forrest Croman, Elvin Keaton, Homer Lagore, Earl Short, Howard Smith, William Woodring, and Francis Temple will participate with 400 other scouts in the unusual and spectacular clown event.

When the 400 Scouts take their places in the 15 rings in the arena, the public will want to hold tight to chairs, because the excitement that will be furnished by these Scouts in clown stunts and activities will practically take you up into the atmosphere. If such is the case simply tie yourself to a balloon which may be nearby and descend to the floor. There will be hundreds of balloons which may furnish transportation for the spectators.

U. S. TRADE GAIN

WASHINGTON — Manufacturers in the United States are capturing an increasingly large proportion of the international trade in airplanes, engines and parts, according to the Commerce Department. Official records show that in 1932 American exports amounted to 40 per cent of all the airplanes, engines and parts exported from all countries compared with 19 per cent in 1931 and 29 per cent in 1929. During 1932, for the first time, the United States led all nations as an exporter of airplanes, engines and parts.

Boy Scout News

TROOP 152

The weekly meeting was begun by assembly and roll call. A new silk American flag was presented the troop by a Legionnaire, Mr. Nessel. After inspection a half hour was spent in drill led by Assistant Scoutmaster Ward. The boys are learning the formations rapidly and promise to be a "crack" troop at the Scout Circus.

Following this a number of games under the direction of John Maxey were played. The boys gathered in their patrol corners after these, collected dues and gave instructions for a quarter of an hour. After a short speech by Scoutmaster Betts the meeting was dismissed by all repeating the Scout Benediction.

Instructions were given about Scout Circus and the place where the Harmonica Band will play was pointed out. Circus tickets which cost 40c this year, were distributed to the boys. The color guard for the Scout Circus has not as yet been definitely placed.

A hike was held last week in which the boys went to Scioto Park. A number of the boys passed some tests there.

Rumor Of Mob Violence Noticed In Negro Trial

DECATUR, Ala., April 6.—National guardsmen were on the alert today to prevent rumored mob violence at the trial of Haywood Patterson, first of the Scottsboro negroes to be retried after the United States Supreme court set aside their death sentences for criminal assault on two white girls.

Circuit Judge James E. Horton took judicial notice of the reports of impending trouble when he made a speech from the bench yesterday warning the community that the guards had been ordered to shoot to kill.

It was reported by national guard officers that a secret meeting was held here by some 200 men to discuss the trial. Speakers were said to have objected to the slow progress of the case. Similar agitation was reported in Scottsboro, from which town the cases of the nine negroes were removed on chain of venue.

NEW PIECES READY
Captain Joe Burleson, commanding the national guard detachment of 30 men on duty at the courthouse, was prepared to summon reinforcements at an hour's notice. He said two complete companies could be brought here speedily.

It was his report to Judge Horton that led to the dramatic statement of the court.

"I'm going to strengthen the guard if necessary," the Judge told the crowd in the courtroom, "and you've got to kill these guards before you get these prisoners. The soldiers and the sheriff's men are expected to defend these prisoners with their lives. Any man who defies them may expect to forfeit his life."

Militiamen with automatic rifles surrounded the courthouse, and the trial proceeded in orderly fashion.

Patterson took the stand and denied that he had taken part in a group attack on Mrs. Victoria Price and Ruby Bates, Huntsville mill girls, while they were hobnobbing their way from Chattanooga to their homes on a freight train.

STARS ABOUND IN NEW EDITION OF GEORGE WHITE'S 'SCANDALS'

Firm in the belief that playgoers want quality entertainment at a scale of prices within the reach of their purse under present economic conditions, George White has booked his newest edition of the "Scandals" at the Palace, Columbus, for one week on Friday, April 7th. Here, because of the increased seating capacity, Mr. White has inaugurated a scale of prices that is revolutionary for "Scandals."

"Scandals" this year boasts one of the most expensive and most illustrious casts in its entire history.

Novel and strikingly original from a scenic and costume standpoint, Mr. White's latest extravaganza shapes up as the most entertaining and lavish in the long and successful series.

Headed by the inimitable pair of jesters, Willie and Eugene Howard, the company includes five celebrated newcomers, Eleanor Powell, Loomis Sisters, Melissa Mason, Helen Gordon and Ross McLean. Others in the big cast are Joseph Vitale, James Howard, Julie Gorman, Edna Pence, Alice Carleton, Florence Healey, Marion O'Day.

As usual, George White has assembled a bevy of rare beauties for his chorus. Trained in the dance by Mr. White, himself one of the best dancers in the theatre, the "Scandals" beauties this season will emerge with something new in the way of inventive terpsichore.

Lew Brown and Ray Henderson, composers of many of the outstanding songs which the nation has sung and whistled during the last decade, are responsible for the music and lyrics. The sketches are by George White, Lew Brown, assisted by Irving Caesar.

Joseph Urban, master scenic designer, has created the settings. Renowned for his architectural background and brilliant color blendings, Urban has "out Urbaned" himself in "Scandals."

friend" of Mrs. Price, who is prosecuting witness in the Patterson case. Carter is a surprise witness, who was not called in the Scottsboro trial. The defense expected to prove by him that he accompanied Mrs. Price on her freight ride of two years ago.

Ruby Bates was still mysteriously missing. She is said to have disappeared from her home a month ago.

The case is expected to go to the jury the latter part of the week.

Expectant Mothers

WOMEN who suffer month after month and prospective mothers who need added strength should take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Mrs. Chas. Stieve of 2009 Sandusky St., Sandusky, Ohio, says: "I became so nervous and had so little strength before my little girl arrived, I was unable to do the slightest housework. My system being in such a weakened condition, I feared I would have considerable trouble. I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription all during this period and can say it helped me wonderfully; it gave me new strength, as well as a healthy baby. It certainly proved to be the right tonic for me." Sold by druggists.

Luckies Please!

In every corner of the world, both here and overseas, wherever you find joy in life, it's always "Luckies Please!"

"Cream of the Crop" gives character...
"Toasting" makes them mild
What puts character in a cigarette? The quality of the tobacco. Lucky Strike's tobaccos are carefully selected for quality, for tenderness, for distinctive flavor... the finest, most carefully selected tobaccos grown.
And Lucky is truly mild—because these fine tobaccos are "toasted"—mellowed and purified by the exclusive Lucky Strike process. For these two reasons—Character and Mildness—"Luckies Please!"
because "It's toasted"

TEMPERED RUBBER gives you MORE SAFE MILES from HERE to THERE

Figure the value of any tire on a cost-per-mile basis and you'll readily understand why U. S. Tires give you more for your money. Their tougher safety treads of TEMPERED RUBBER wear down slower and greatly prolong the life. Extensive tests prove they provide a minimum of 7% to 36% longer mileage than other leading brands. But they cost you no more. We don't ask a penny premium for "America's Smartest, Longest Wearing Tire." In fact, we'll make a generous trade-in allowance for your worn tires and equip your car with U. S. Royals at an attractively low figure.

French View Franching
S nation's war debt to the United States is reported to be shifting around to a point favorable to payment of the $19,000,000 installment held up by a vote of the chamber last December.
The reason for this change are a little vague. One is reported to be a desire that France place herself on an equal footing with Great Britain in order to be prepared to suggest that a moratorium be declared on the old annuities pending negotiation of a new settlement. There is growing opposition, too, to France's defaulting with the consequent damage to her credit. Failure to make the $19,000,000 payment is regarded as only a technical default which can still be corrected. If this be paid before the next installment is due June 15, the expectation is held that an extension of the moratorium then will be granted because of the inability of President Roosevelt, under the pressure of other matters, to effect a general settlement before that date.
In the background, however, can be sensed another reason, one which was hinted at by M. Herriot in a recent lecture. "When one thinks of what may happen tomorrow," said the former premier, who all along has been in favor of payment, "our country should no further prolong the cruel misunderstanding with that great democratic nation. For France may again need to appeal to one of the richest sources of material support, as was the case several years ago."
In other words, France sees the possibility of becoming involved in another war and wishes to be in a position to call upon the United States for help.
This reason will not appeal to Americans. The United States would not let sentiment drag it into another European war. If the French think that by paying their honest debts to us they will be buying alliance with the United States, they will find themselves sadly mistaken.
Talking to the Public
W HILE denying reports that President Roosevelt had decided to make regular radio talks twice a month, the white house said he would broadcast as frequently as circumstances warrant. The favorable reception given his radio discussion of the banking situation was responsible for this decision.
The conclusion is to be drawn from the white house statement that Mr. Roosevelt will appear directly to the public for support in any projected policies that seem endangered by congressional opposition or the purpose of which the people do not understand.
This course is a commendable one and will receive popular approval. Other presidents have, at times, found it to their advantage to take their cases directly to the people. The radio, as an excellent medium for this, Mr. Hoover made use of it occasionally but to no great extent and mainly for scheduled addresses of a general nature.
President Roosevelt is represented as believing that the radio offers unusual opportunities to an executive, in the consolidation of public opinion behind any program or plans he is especially anxious to see succeed. In this view, he is evidently right.
A president who takes the people into his confidence by a frank discussion of his problems with them in their homes is much more likely to win their good will and support than would be the case by embracing his views in a formal message to congress.

CHAPTER FIFTY-TWO

Bundry turned his clay-colored face to de Bernis, thrusting out a lip and shrugging his disgust.

"I've done what I could, Charley. You've heard."

Monsieur de Bernis was very solemn. "I've heard. I understand. It is finished, then." He too, shrugged.

"The fortune of war," Himself he lifted over his head the silver-encrusted baldric that carried his sword, and proffered it to Sharples in token of surrender.

The lieutenant took it, inclining his head a little in acknowledgment, and handed it to one of his men who stood by the bow of the stranded longboat.

"And now Tom Leach, if you please," he said, looking round, as he spoke, wondering, perhaps, that he had not yet seen that redoubtable pirate, and that he should not have been present at this parley.

"As, yes," said Bundry grimly. "Tom Leach, to be sure." He hesitated a moment, his piercing eyes upon the fair young face of the lieutenant. "Dead or alive was the condition," he said, between question and assertion.

Lieutenant Sharples stared. "What? Is he dead already?"

Bundry nodded, turned, and started off up the beach towards the massed buccaners and what lay behind them, screened by them.

Monsieur de Bernis went after him, caught and held him a moment by the shoulder whilst he murmured something to him. It was something that made that pallid mask momentarily change its set expression. Then, with a grin and a nod, Bundry went on, and de Bernis came slowly back, and at a word from Sharples entered the waiting boat.

Watching ever from the red bulwarks of the Royal Mary, Priscilla saw and understood. A little moan escaped her.

"The cowards! The treacherous cowards!" she cried. "They have surrendered him. Surrendered him to save their vile skins!"

The Major, careful to betray no satisfaction, answered colourlessly.

"Naturally. Could anything else have been expected of them?" He set an arm about her to steady and comfort her as she faltered there, suddenly overcome, her senses swimming.

Tenderly he supported her as far as the main hatch, and gently lowered her to sit upon the coaming. There, with her elbows on her knees, she took her head in her hands, abandoning herself to silent misery. The Major sat down beside her, and his arm was soothingly placed again about her shoulders. He could go so far as to stifle his resentment of this overwhelming grief. But he had no consoling words to offer her.

An officer, pacing by the rail of the quarter deck, looked down upon them, as did, too, from the other side, some of the hands leaping on the forecastle. But Miss Priscilla heeded nobody and nothing. Grief and terror dazed her senses. It was as if some part of her had been violently wrenched away.

She was aroused at last by the gusty passage of the large gangway figure of the Admiral, who crossed the waist with elephantine tread a couple of men following him. As a dream she remembered that she had heard someone say that Sharples was returning. She looked up to see Sir Henry reach the bulwarks and then she heard his brazen voice raised in passion.

"Where the devil's Leach, then? Sharples hasn't got him, after all. Damn him for a fool! Below there, with his gun-craw. He'll be needed in a moment. I'll shoot them all to bits! I'll teach the dogs! Do they think they can get gay with Henry Morgan?"

He leaned far over the bulwarks to speak to someone immediately below.

"What the devil's this, Sharples? Where's Tom Leach?"

"A moment, Sir Henry!" sang the lieutenant's voice from below.

The boat scraped and bumped against the sides of the Royal Mary as it brought up at the foot of the ladder. A pause followed, and then the staring, fearful eyes of Priscilla beheld the figure of Monsieur de Bernis gradually rising above the bulwarks, until he stood there, steadying himself by a ratline, at the head of the entrance-ladder. Calm and smiling, as she had ever known him in the face of every peril, did he now appear.

It was incredible that a man should meet his fate so gallantly.

Sir Henry, standing below him and a little aside, looked up to meet the Frenchman's debonaire smile with a scowl, whilst the head and shoulders of de Bernis' servant, Pierre, began to come into view as he climbed close in his master's wake.

"Where the devil is Leach, then?" Sir Henry trumpeted. "What does this mean?"

Steadying himself ever by the ratline, Monsieur de Bernis half-turned to Pierre, and held out his left hand. The half-caste proffered him a bundle in coarse sailcloth, the natural grey of which was smeared and stained with blood. Monsieur de Bernis took it, balanced it a moment, and then tossed it forward. It fell at Sir Henry's feet, with a soft thud. The Admiral looked down at it, and then up at Monsieur de Bernis, frowning.

"That's all of him you need," said Monsieur de Bernis. "All of him you asked for. The head, on which you set the price of five hundred pounds."

Sir Henry breathed gustily. "By Jupiter!" His face expanded. He looked down again at the gruesome bundle from which a stain was slowly spreading on the yellow deck. Then he touched it with a foot that was shod in a gaudily rosetted shoe. He touched it gingerly at first, then kicked it vigorously aside.

"Take that away!" he roared to one of the men who attended him, and upon that gave his attention once more to de Bernis.

"You're damned lateral, Charles," he snorted.

De Bernis leapt lightly down to the deck.

"Which is only another way of saying that I am as good as my word. Or as good as my boat, if you prefer it. It needs a thief to catch a thief, as Major Sands there thinks they knew, also made you Governor of Jamaica?"

Sir Henry looked across at Major Sands where he had come to his feet in his bewilderment. He stood beside Miss Priscilla, who remained seated staring, scarcely daring to believe what was suddenly being made plain at least in part.

"Oh? Him?" said Sir Henry. "He thinks that does he? Bah!" And he shrugged the pompous Major at of his further consideration. "We've other things to think of. There's a deal here that needs to be explained."

"You shall have all the explanation you could wish when you're and me the five hundred for that head, and the other five hundred you wagered me that I could not get it for you."

Where the devil's Leach, then? Sharples hadn't got him, after all. Damn him for a fool! Below there, with his gun-craw. He'll be needed in a moment. I'll shoot them all to bits! I'll teach the dogs! Do they think they can get gay with Henry Morgan?"

Morgan made a wry face. "Aye, Charles?"

"I've never had occasion to. But I have been doubting you for three mortal days. Three days late you are at the rendez-vous here, and for three days I've been in torment from anxiety, and forced to endure that dead dog's intolerable insults. But I paid him in full when you hove in sight this morning. It was necessary, too, so that I might be literal, as you say."

"We are quits on that, anyway," grumbled Morgan. "For ye'd be in mortal anxiety now but for my stratagem to bring you safely out of their hands. Where would ye be if I hadn't demanded that they should give you up?"

"Where I should deserve to be stood there, steadying myself by a ratline, at the head of the entrance-ladder. Calm and smiling, as she had ever known him in the face of every peril, did he now appear. It was incredible that a man should meet his fate so gallantly."

Sir Henry, standing below him and a little aside, looked up to meet the Frenchman's debonaire smile with a scowl, whilst the head and shoulders of de Bernis' servant, Pierre, began to come into view as he climbed close in his master's wake.

"Oh? Him?" said Sir Henry. "He thinks that does he? Bah!" And he shrugged the pompous Major at of his further consideration. "We've other things to think of. There's a deal here that needs to be explained."

"You shall have all the explanation you could wish when you're and me the five hundred for that head, and the other five hundred you wagered me that I could not get it for you."

Where the devil's Leach, then? Sharples hadn't got him, after all. Damn him for a fool! Below there, with his gun-craw. He'll be needed in a moment. I'll shoot them all to bits! I'll teach the dogs! Do they think they can get gay with Henry Morgan?"

Morgan made a wry face. "Aye, Charles?"

"I've never had occasion to. But I have been doubting you for three mortal days. Three days late you are at the rendez-vous here, and for three days I've been in torment from anxiety, and forced to endure that dead dog's intolerable insults. But I paid him in full when you hove in sight this morning. It was necessary, too, so that I might be literal, as you say."

"We are quits on that, anyway," grumbled Morgan. "For ye'd be in mortal anxiety now but for my stratagem to bring you safely out of their hands. Where would ye be if I hadn't demanded that they should give you up?"

"Where I should deserve to be stood there, steadying myself by a ratline, at the head of the entrance-ladder. Calm and smiling, as she had ever known him in the face of every peril, did he now appear. It was incredible that a man should meet his fate so gallantly."

Sir Henry, standing below him and a little aside, looked up to meet the Frenchman's debonaire smile with a scowl, whilst the head and shoulders of de Bernis' servant, Pierre, began to come into view as he climbed close in his master's wake.

"Where the devil is Leach, then?" Sir Henry trumpeted. "What does this mean?"

Steadying himself ever by the ratline, Monsieur de Bernis half-turned to Pierre, and held out his left hand. The half-caste proffered him a bundle in coarse sailcloth, the natural grey of which was smeared and stained with blood. Monsieur de Bernis took it, balanced it a moment, and then tossed it forward. It fell at Sir Henry's feet, with a soft thud. The Admiral looked down at it, and then up at Monsieur de Bernis, frowning.

"That's all of him you need," said Monsieur de Bernis. "All of him you asked for. The head, on which you set the price of five hundred pounds."

Sir Henry breathed gustily. "By Jupiter!" His face expanded. He looked down again at the gruesome bundle from which a stain was slowly spreading on the yellow deck. Then he touched it with a foot that was shod in a gaudily rosetted shoe. He touched it gingerly at first, then kicked it vigorously aside.

"Take that away!" he roared to one of the men who attended him, and upon that gave his attention once more to de Bernis.

"You're damned lateral, Charles," he snorted.

De Bernis leapt lightly down to the deck.

"Which is only another way of saying that I am as good as my word. Or as good as my boat, if you prefer it. It needs a thief to catch a thief, as Major Sands there thinks they knew, also made you Governor of Jamaica?"

Sir Henry looked across at Major Sands where he had come to his feet in his bewilderment. He stood beside Miss Priscilla, who remained seated staring, scarcely daring to believe what was suddenly being made plain at least in part.

"Oh? Him?" said Sir Henry. "He thinks that does he? Bah!" And he shrugged the pompous Major at of his further consideration. "We've other things to think of. There's a deal here that needs to be explained."

New Mannish

In welcome to the vernal season, Ellisa Landi, glamorous screen star, wears this snappy Spring ensemble as she enjoys a brisk walk on the Hollywood boulevards. The suit has a distinctly mannish cut, the neat jacket being of the two-button variety beloved by the stronger sex.

Eighth grade boys, 31;
Seventh grade girls, 8;
Seventh boys, 15.

The seniors are busy having their pictures taken, trying to decide about wearing caps and gowns, how many invitations to order, whether to buy personal cards to go with invitations, whether to spend the proceeds from the class play yet to be given for some memento to the school or for a trip to Niagara, Washington or the World's Fair in Chicago.

Bowling Alleys Open At 7 P.M.

When Mayor B. T. Hedges tossed the first ball down the alleys this evening Circleville's official bowling season will be underway. The scene will be the Bales building on E. Main-st where the Circleville Recreation parlors are ready for use; the time will be 7 o'clock, and from then on it will be a big time for local persons who have long had a desire to learn to bowl but have never been given the opportunity.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

THIS summer promises to be one of the most interesting in a long while as far as Circleville sports followers are concerned ***

Local sports, of course, are of more interest than any other  Several lines of activities will be offered enthusiastically with the golf season ready to begin—as soon as the weather is satisfactory—bowling to begin this evening, on brand new alleys, a muzzle-loading gun club being formed—and recreation ball organizations being contemplated ***

The Pickaway-co Country Club, with Frank Casey returning as professional, is ready for its season with the "ratway" and greens in better condition than at anytime in the history of the club ***

Recreation ball possibilities appear to be on the minds of many sports-fans and athletes with a location for games proving the stumbling block  It is understood several merchants are ready to back teams but as yet nothing definite has resulted  The Utilities field has been plowed and Mason's is no longer available  Some work on the Commons would make that a satisfactory field while Heise's field is also thought available ***

"Hizzoner," Mayor B. T. Hedges, rates  He has a letter from Mayor Henry Worley, of Columbus, inviting him to a luncheon and to be a guest of the Franklin-co city next Tuesday, day of the opening Red Bird baseball game  The Mayor plans to take advantage of the offer  Some guys have all the luck ***

Grand Finale of Title Bout

Here is the start of the body slam that put an end, for the time being, to the championship aspirations of Nick Lutze, who matched his brain, brawn and endurance against Champion Jim Browning, at New York, for the title. The battle lasted for one hour before the champion placed his opponent to the mat.

ERIE, PA., MAN HITS MAPLES

Earl Hewitt Shows Coolness By "Turkeying" In Final Frame; Score 724.

COLUMBUS, April 6.—King-pin of the singles division, Earl Hewitt of Erie, Pa., was the latest idol of the American Bowling Congress here today.

Hewitt crashed to the top of the individual event yesterday with a powerful score of 724 points rolled up in games of 207, 259 and 258. He replaced Rudy Riepel of Milwaukee who had held the top spot with 722 points.

In addition to landing the first-place berth in the singles, Hewitt also squeezed into sixth place of the all-events division with an aggregate total of 1923.

Hewitt was "plenty hot" in his singles game yesterday and he proved his metal in the tight spots where a mis-placed ball would have ruined his chances. In the final frame, Hewitt needed 29 pins to step out ahead of Riepel and with the calm demeanor of a champion he batted out a trio of clean strikes to take a total of 30.

In the third frame of his last game, Hewitt drew the 4-7-10 split, and immediately put his crashing hook ball into action, tapping off nine consecutive strikes.

One other change was chalked up in the "Big Ten" of the tournament and it also was the work of an Erie, Pa., kegler. Totaling 618 in the team event, 670 in the singles, Charley Johnson, snagged fourth place in the all-events.

CHICAGO READY

CHICAGO, April 6.—More than 1,500 trucks were being loaded in the breweries today for quick delivery as Chicago awaited the stroke of midnight to celebrate the return of legal beer and the end of a 13-year-thirst.

The new 3.2 per cent beer will flow in Chicago and throughout Illinois without the contemplated state regulations due to the failure of the lower house at Springfield last night to agree on the beer control measure proposed by Gov. Henry Horner.

Several weeks will be required to draw up and pass a new control bill, it was conceded.

Fleets of trucks will hurry the new beer at midnight to clubs, cafes, restaurants and a few hotels where celebrations are planned. Police Commissioner James Allman announced that the "lid will be off" and instructed the police to concentrate on protecting the hurrying beer trucks from hi-jackers.

TO MEAN REVELEY

The celebration is expected to become a week-end period of revelry here, with all leading hotels and night life gathering places announcing plans for gala parties Friday night and Saturday night.

Chicago's seven huge licensed breweries have provided 200,000 barrels of beer for the week-end celebration despite the fact that the breweries here will supply large areas in five surrounding states.

Laughter, Josephine motored to Columbus Sunday and spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. Harold Voelner.

Vorhes Rolland and family, of Chillicothe, spent Sunday at Everett Stevensons.

Miss Garnet Ross, Art Student, of Detroit spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Ross.

CHOIR ENJOYS PARTY AFTER REHEARSAL

A pleasant evening was spent Wednesday at the United Brethren Community house by thirty-five members of the church choir and a few visitors, who assembled after the rehearsal for the Easter cantata.

The affair was given as a pleasant surprise for Miss Johnda Toole, who is directing the choir and for Miss Ladybird Sipe, mathematics teacher in the Berea high school, who is spending spring vacation at the home of her parents, Rev. and Mrs. T. C. Harper.

A general good time was enjoyed in chatting and listening to the young men of the chorus, harmonizing in old and favorite melodies.

A dainty two course luncheon was served at the tables prettily decorated with yellow and green and centered with green candles in crisp crepe paper yellow jonquils.

Those who arranged and carried out the happy event were Mrs. William Hegele, Mrs. Maggie Morris, Mrs. Iley Greeno, Mrs. Alice Cady, Mrs. John Neuding and Mrs. Ralph Long.

MISSIONARY SOCIETIES TO HAVE MID-YEAR MEET

A large attendance from Pickaway-co missionary societies is expected at the mid-year meeting of the Cincinnati branch of the Woman's Missionary Society which will convene in Walnut-st. church, Chillicothe, April 10 and 11.

The Cincinnati branch is comprised of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, West Virginia, Michigan, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama, with 1,030 auxiliaries and a membership of 41,000. Mrs. J. M. Dolbey of Cincinnati is president.

The meeting will open at 1:30 p. m. Monday, April 10, with a business session open to all. At 4 o'clock talks will be given by the missionaries attending the meeting. A public meeting will be held in the evening at 7:30, at which time Bishop Lester Smith will give an address. The Tuesday session will convene at 9 a. m. and close at 3:30 p. m.

Those who attend will feel amply repaid as the program will be intensely interesting and full of missionary information.

LUTHERAN LADIES HAVE MEETING WEDNESDAY

Dr. G. J. Troutman, presided at the monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of Trinity Lutheran church held Wednesday afternoon in the Parish house with 60 members and guests present.

Following the opening service consisting of singing, scripture reading and prayer, the missionary reading on "Iowa's Influence" was given by Mrs. C. H. Palm. Mrs. Harry Groce read an interesting leaflet on the work of "The India Lace School," which the local society helps to support.

During a business session Mrs. Elmer Wolf was appointed as delegate to attend the meeting of the Columbus group of the Woman's Missionary Federation of the American Lutheran church to be held April 27 at the Emanuel Lutheran church in Columbus.

Mrs. James Carpenter was in charge of the afternoon's program, which was opened with a vocal solo, "Behold the King" by Miss Ida Walters, who was accompanied at the piano by Carl Palm.

Mr. Palm rendered two selections on the musical saw, "Beautiful Savior" and "Jesus Savior Pilot Me," and the concluding number was two vocal solos by Billy Weller accompanied at the piano by his mother, Mrs. Floyd Weller. He sang "A Shanty in Old Shanty Town" and "Rockaby Moon."

A social hour followed and refreshments were served by the committee comprised of Mrs. Ed Sensenbrenner, chairman, Mrs. A. D. Schumm, Mrs. John Howard, Mrs. Fred Martin, Mrs. John Barthelmas, Mrs. J. D. Hummel, Mrs. Charles Miller, Mrs. J. C. Goeller, Mrs. Mrs. Vernon Bolender, Mrs. Earl Hoffman, Mrs. C. O. Leist and Miss Ada Shoenberger.

ENTHUSIASTIC AUDIENCE LAUDS PRESENTATION OF JUNIOR PLAY

An enthusiastic audience greeted the cast of "Heart Trouble," comprised of members of the Junior class of the local high school Wednesday evening when it gave its first presentation of the three act play by Howard Chenery, under the capable direction of Charles Hax, dramatics teacher in the school.

Mr. Hax is deserving of much credit for the well selected and carefully trained cast. Special mention is due Miss Dorothy Bartley and Miss Betty Brown for their splendid portrayals of Patricia Morrison and her mother, Mrs. Grace Morrison, respectively. Each member of the group did excellent work being in character at all times.

The story concerns the heart troubles of the Morrison children. Laura Morrison is supposed to be in love with Tommy Caler, but becomes infatuated with Conrad Tyler, a newcomer in town. Tommy gives his attentions to Laura's sister, Patricia, in an attempt to make Laura jealous and come to her senses. It is great fun to learn who Conrad Tyler really is and which girl wins Tommy Caler.

The entire action of the play takes place in the living room of the Morrison home in Middleville, a small town in the Middle West.

Following is the cast of characters:

Mrs. Grace Morrison, Betty Brown
Laura Morrison, Dorothy Bartley
Conrad Tyler, Lee Cook
Fred Morrison, Lyman England
Lenore Appleby, Mary K. May
Tommy Caler, Denver Greenlee
Jethro Appleby, John Robinson
Beatrice Tyler, Martha Rader

Enjoyable music was furnished before the presentation and between acts by the high school orchestra under the able direction of C. F. Zaenglein.

The play, which is given to raise funds for financing the annual Junior-Senior banquet, will be repeated tonight at 8 o'clock in the school auditorium.

Miss Hazel Wolford, Pickaway-twp., is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Russell Hoffman, of Valley View.

Mrs. Charles Welch, S. Court-st., who underwent an operation for hernia at St. Frances hospital, Columbus, Saturday, is recovering nicely.
